

n Line
ion
S ure

partment
of health
ny daily
was not

el that I not help medical onth. Is make an

heir last eir pen-
due to a ision for e to the
68. You
cs. That

ovement
me but got after replace side of r pours into the

I com-
will be ighbor-as been replaced

to help n I got
of my letter
response.

ir order
matter
doubled ith that
ou. We aspirin.

VIETNAM VETERANS Against the War parade through Chalfont, Bucks County, on their way to a rally at Valley Forge. March started in Morristown, N. J.

150 Antiwar Veterans Stage Rally at Valley Forge

About 150 Vietnam Veterans Against the War marched into Valley Forge State Park this morning for a rally ending their three-day, 86-mile hike from Morristown, N. J.

The men, who made a mock sweep of the area between Gen. Washington's two Revolutionary War campsites, demonstrating tactics employed by U. S. forces in Vietnam along the way, bivouacked last night on the grounds of the Gwynedd Friends' Meeting House, Sumnerstown pike, after the Friends voted unanimously to make the property available.

A farm, about two miles from the Meeting House, previously offered to the group for bivouac, was withdrawn by its owner early yesterday.

Jeered in Jersey

Alfred E. Patchkiss, of Forest drive, Gwynedd, a member of the Meeting, said, "Even though it was a last-minute

A spokesman for the veterans, John Kemick, 22, of Newark, N. J., said that despite the withdrawal of the farmland, the residents of Pennsylvania had been polite, respectful and helpful during the march.

He said that on the first leg of the trip, through New Jersey, the group had been jeered and insulted. He said that in one New Jersey town, men came out of a bar and called the marchers "draft-dodgers." "How can we be draft dodgers," Mr. Kemick said, "when there are 110 Purple Heart medal winners among us?"

Phila. Veterans Join

The march was joined by many Philadelphia veterans yesterday. One of them, Don Sproehle, 22, of 4621 N. Broad st., walked with a cane, both his legs having been injured in Vietnam action.

Sproehle said he had spent 20 months in the service, six

Among those greeting the veterans as they entered Gwynedd Valley was 15-year-old Bui Nyac Huong, who was injured by a landmine in his village home near Da Nang and is in the U. S. for corrective surgery.

Marchers who had learned some Vietnamese during their tours of duty there surrounded the boy and conversed with him in his native tongue.

Guerilla Tactics

Guerilla theater actions performed by the group yesterday included a small rally at Doylestown Courthouse plaza and an "attack" on a Montgomeryville shopping center.

At the Doylestown rally, Paul Green, of Upper Black Eddy, a founder of Veterans for Peace and an infantry sergeant in World War II, made a speech damning the human waste the war had caused.

As he completed his speech, and "took him into a nearby building where they "executed" him.

3 Girls 'Killed'

In Montgomeryville, the soldiers, shouting and bearing mock weapons, ran onto the parking lot of a shopping center and "killed" three girls, members of Nurses For Peace, a group of women accompanying the soldiers.

The veterans said the purpose of the theater presentations was to bring the Vietnam War home so that Americans can see what happens.

A former police chief of Bayonne, N. J., Eddie Foerst, in Doylestown visiting the National Shrine of Our Lady of Czestochowa, said, "I'm against the war, just like they are and everybody in America is. But why don't they try to eliminate it by votes, not by coming in here this way and causing trouble. By their tac-

A
W In

W Arri
Wo
at and too
E
bas
qua
ing
tra Arri
T
up
Cor
alo
ser
uni
bat
cha
a
V
sai
tim
en

Yo
2d
In

Or
and
gang
them
Nort
Po
son,
died
chesi
Jei
Da
the sylva
dition
in hi
Sn
tives
been fero
north Berk
stopp
they
Sm
Jeffe
er y Norri
numb
Jef
and
bled
Smith
to a Stanl
gered
reside
Poli